Structured for Failure

- What if you are creating internal limitations that are keeping you from living the life that you're created to live?
- Are some people structured for failure?
- Is it possible that your limitations are not external?
- There is no experience that you will ever go through that can create in you internal limitations; all limitations within you are created by you.
- It's so much easier to blame someone else.

The Weight of Success (10:30)

- Your internal limitations are not the product of what you've experienced; they're the product of your response to those experiences.
- You have the capacity to destroy those structures of failure and replace them with structures for success.
- Your greatest challenge is not going to be overcoming the weight of failure but overcoming the weight of success.
- It's not failure that cripples great leaders; it's the weight of success.

Extraordinary Lives (12:45)

- It must be nice to be happy with an ordinary life, but that may not be a real human experience.
- There's genius that has been latently placed within you, and your soul will always defy your own desire to choose safety, comfort, predictability, and security.
- It's impossible to settle for less and find fulfillment as a human.
- When you choose to live a life that's average, you have a much wider span for error.
- If you decide that you're not going to allow your God-given potential to remain latent within you, your margin for error gets smaller and smaller.
- You have to begin to live a life that really matters.

Will You Settle? (16:45)

- The facts always reinforce the past, not the future.
- Genius is given to everyone, but only a few choose to live in that genius.
- Will you settle for the ordinary version of you, or will you make those granular mind shifts that will unlock the God-given capacity inside of you and begin to live the life of your dreams?
